Organization Narrative

Dentons Washington DC The Washington office of Dentons traces its roots to 1939, when President Franklin D. Roosevelt's attorney general returned to private law practice to form his own firm. Since that time, this office has grown dramatically to perform groundbreaking work for clients large and small on a wide range of matters. Our Public Policy and Regulation team offers strategic advice and advocacy based on many years of experience working with members of Congress, high-level congressional staff, senior officials in the executive branch and veterans of corporate and association public affairs. Washington's Litigation and Dispute Resolution team handles a wide variety of litigation and dispute matters in courts and other tribunals. Our broad and diverse practice covers all areas of dispute resolution, including commercial litigation, white collar/fraud, class actions, financial institutions, insurance, bankruptcy, environmental, intellectual property and labor and employment. Our Health Care practice counsels a diverse range of clients with regard to regulatory compliance, public policy, reimbursement and coverage, transactions, fraud and abuse matters, governance, privacy and other issues. The Energy team provides strategic support worldwide to clients throughout the industry, from major oil companies and independents, power generators and utilities, to solar, wind, hydro, biomass and cogeneration companies; from transportation operators, financial firms and energy users, to investors interested in the development of renewable and alternative energy sources. The Corporate team has represented corporate entities from their startup phase through their initial public offering or acquisition. Our DC office also claims a large Intellectual Property practice, focused on patent preparation, patent protection and litigation, along with related licensing, technology transfer and due diligence services. Other nationally recognized capabilities include International Trade, representing business interests and government entities from around the world; Native American Law and Policy, which helps tribal governments and businesses confront an increasingly complicated legal, political and business dynamic; and Insurance, which represents global insurers on their most significant coverage claims, financial litigation and regulatory investigations.
